Home Department To Be Theme of Morning Session Tomorrow—Election in Evening.

Personal purity, as it relates to an important part of temperance instruction that should be given children in the elementary departments of the funday schools. So Mrs. Maud Jenkins Paldwin, superintendent of the Pennsylvania Sunday School Association, told the delegates to the twentyand annual convention of the Sunday School Association of the District, nt the New York Avenue Presbyterian Thurch, at the second session of the convention today.

Mrs. Baldwin came to discuss the methods of work in the primary and funior departments, which she declares more properly called the elementary grades. She made a series of addresses on this subject during the norning and afternoon sessions, and will speak again this evening at the Emphasizes Personal Purity.

The teaching of temperance to the very young in the Sunday schools was the tenic to which Mrs. Baldwin ad-dressed herself this morning. She didressed herself this morning. She di-vided temperance late three important divisions—that dealing with alcoholic liquors or drogs, that dealing with to-bacco in all its forms, and that dealing with personal purity. Each is as im-portant as the other, she declared. The child, even as young as from three to five years, can learn to respect the body and control of the appetites. It is necessary if the adult is to have self-control that it be taught the growing child.

Airs. Baldwin also advocated getting in touch with the parents of the children. She declared that few mothers know proper ways of feeding their babies, and that the foundations of later intemperance might be laid in the manner in which mothers care for their infants. She announced that it is her policy to set in touch with the parents and to talk to them about the care of the children, according to improved scientific methods.

Urges Fight Upon Evils.

Real temperance, she said, is the mod-erate use of all good things and total abstinence from harmful things. Alcohol and tobacco are necessarily harm-ful, she said, but few teachers of Sunful, she said, but few teachers of Sunday schools recognize how far their responsibility in teaching temperance goes. She urged the teachers of Washington to take a wider, broader view and fight all the evils she had outlined. The morning session was called to order by Mrs. Washington Topham, superintendent of the elementary department. The Rev. Joseph T. Watts, Sunday school secretary of the Baptist General Association of Virginia, conducted-an conference on junior work. This afternoon Mrs. H. B. Moulton called the third session of the convention to order at 2 o'clock and after devotional exercises by the Rev. Harold C. Warren, Mrs. Baldwin spoke on missionary teaching in the primary and beginners department.

Tonight Mrs. Buldwin will talk on the religious lice of the child, and the Rev. Mr. Watts will speak of the junior age as the age of evangelistic opportunity. Temorrow the morning session will be devoted to the home department. In the afternoon the training of teachers will be discussed, and in the evening, at the final session, officers will be elected.

The convention was opened last night at the New York avenue church with the largest attendance in the history of the organization. The principal feature was an address by the Rev. Mr. | Watts, who addressed the convention Watts, who addressed the convention again this morning, on the necessity for the members of the church to take a closer interest in the Sunday school and do more to assist in its work.

The convention was called to order by President T. A. Hostetler, whose annual report showed an increase of 11 per cent in the number of scholars uniting with the courches; an increase of 4 per cent in the amount of money contributed; a slight increase in attendance and practically the same enrollment as last year. President Hostetler declared that he believes the time is ripe for prohibition in the District, and the Sunday schools could be depended on to help bring it about. W. W. Millan, trustee of the International Sunday School Association, spoke on the cooperative spirit.

a large crowd gathered around him. The fork has a heavy wooden handle about the size of the knob on a golf stick. The juggler has used this fork for some time, and the handle bears the impression of all his techt, as well as some of his gore. The prongs are three inches long and their points are almost as fine as needles.

Bedini today recalled the occasion on which a turnip dropped from a building struck his fork, breaking the handle and jamming it down his throat. It was while in the hospital recovering that he had his wife throw away all his forks, tear up all the newspaper clippings telling of his feats of jugglery, and he resolved to "out the game."

To asteguard himself against a repetition of such an accident, Bedini will wran the wooden handle of his fork with heavy twine, so that in case the wood splits it will be held together.
